JUNIOR LEADERS AT 1966 BOAT SHOW

Promptly at 6 a.m. on a bleak Friday morning in January, the minibus rolled out of the gate and a combined party of the Canoe Club and the Sailing Club was on its way to the 1966 Boat Show. This opportunity arose when Capt Cuthill was heard to mention that the four new Sport Mermaid slalom trainer canoes ordered from the Canoe Centre at Twickenham would cost £8 to have delivered. The O I/C Sailing, looking for a good excuse to take a party to the Boat Show, suggested that the canoes could be collected and towed back to Denbury for half the cost, on the trailer behind the minibus. So it was arranged that the party of canoeists, sailors and one photographer would make the trip.

The first objective was the Canoe Centre at Twickenham where we left the trailer to be loaded with the canoes, to be collected on the return journey. The Boat Show at Earl's Court is only a fifteen-minute drive from Twickenham, so by 2.30 p.m. we had paid our 5s. entrance fee and were among the boats.

By the marine section we found a stand of generators displayed by G and M Power who had recently presented the Regiment with new generators. Mr. G. Clarke of G and M was pleased to show the boys present the wide range of generating equipment that his firm produced.

This was the day that HRH Princess Margaret visited the Show and our photographer discovered how rough the press photographer scrimmage can be on occasions.

It is impossible to take in all that is on display at the exhibition, short of taking up residence for the period of the Show on one of the craft, but in our five-hour spell we did see all the highlights. The Daily Express had the 12-foot Sea Egg in which

John Ridding crossed the Atlantic last summer on display. When you consider that this small vessel is smaller than the Regimental Enterprises, it was an extraordinary feat. To see the cramped space at close quarters was even more impressive.

Walking around the exhibition, J/Sig Keohane met Maj S. Townsend Rt, who runs the British Kiel Yacht Club, which owns a number of cruising and racing craft on behalf of the troops serving in Germany. Maj Townsend was delighted to discover that the Regiment sails on Aquila, a hundred square meter yacht whose sister ship is the pride of the British Kiel Yacht Club. He has suggested that any Junior Leader who is going to serve in Germany and wishes to cruise on BYKC yachts should contact him direct and he will find him a place in a crew and if necessary, give him further instruction under sail. Anyone posted to BAOR who would like to take up this offer should contact Capt McMahon for the address.

That evening the party made its way to the Union Jack Club in the Waterloo Road, just opposite Waterloo Station. The Sailing Club had booked ahead and each Junior Leader was given an individual room for his night's stay in town. Bed, breakfast and a private room for 7s. 3d. must surely rank as London's best buy.

The next morning a quick sightseeing tour of some of the sights gave everyone a stretch before picking up the minibus for the trip back. At Twickenham we secured the canoes to the trailer and settled down for the journey. In spite of the weather forecast of snow, we completed the expedition without mishap and were pleased to find the duty cook had a marvellous hot meal ready for us on arrival.

NEWS, VIEW AND HUMOUR - UGH! FROM JAVELIN TROOP

A JAVELIN IN THE DRAMA CLUB

At the beginning of last term I went along to a meeting of the Drama Club purely out of interest and also because a lot of the boys from the troop said it was good fun and a most pleasant way to spend an evening. At the first meeting we decided which pantomime was to be performed. This was done with a show of hands for the choice lay between Ali Baba and Cinderella. As can be seen elsewhere in "Junior Mercury," the latter won.

The following week came the auditions. I, myself, didn't get a reading part, but nevertheless I was content with the role I was given. The next time we met rehearsals began in earnest and then time seemed to fly, for it was not very long before the last week was upon us and the pressure was on. That last week was the perfect example of feverish haste. In it, scenery was constructed and painted, the lighting was fixed, costumes finally fitted and adjusted, props got ready and in the midst of all this, the final polishing-up of the cast was going on. Among Javelin Troop boys who were involved in all this activity were Les Randall (who spent most of his time during the actual performance in the rafters above the stage, dropping props down and pulling up those props which had to vanish), Steve Sparnon, Paul McMahaon, Tom Joynes, Roy Gordon, 'Marty' Turner, 'Burney' Hallows, 'Paddy' Rainnie and myself.

Anyway, all the hard work proved to be worth it for the pantomime was a complete success and everybody associated with it finally enjoyed all the effort that they had expended.

WHOSE WIFE ?

Two men met at a cocktail party and as they stood talking, one glanced across the room and remarked, "Get a load of that huge woman over there with a nose like a banana and a figure like a baby elephant."

"That's my wife," said the other man.

"Oh! I'm sorry," said the first man.

"What d'you mean, you're sorry?"

1st coloured boy: Well. Mah paw's name is Ferdinand and mah maw's name is Liza. They call me Ferdiliza.

There was a glow worm walking backwards. Suddenly he walked into a meat slicer. He was delighted!

And then there was this man walking down the road with a lemon in his ear. "Hey Fred!" called his mate, "What's that lemon doing in your ear?" "Don't be daft!" was the reply. "You've heard of a hearing aid. Well this is a lemonade."

A fat woman got stuck in a turnstile at an exhibition and the commissionaire started to laugh. She glared at him and said, "If you were half a man you would give me a hand."

He roared and spluttered, "If you were half a woman you wouldn't need it."

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

From J/Sig WATSON

Javelin Troop.

Sir,

Would it be possible in your columns to lodge a grievance about the most inadequate heating system in the Academic Wing. In this present period of bitterly cold weather the large smelly stoves are really insufficient to create the right temperature in which to work at academic subjects. I am quite sure that standards would rise with the temperature.

"I am looking to see if my SD cap is still there," was the reply.

"Rubbish! I don't keep looking to see if mine's there."

"No. Your's went five minutes ago."

FISHING ABROAD

I should like to tell you about fishing abroad and, in particular, at Singapore. To start with, you will obviously need the tackle and out there this can be bought very cheaply or even hired at the pond. The ones you get at the ponds are not very reliable as they are rusty and have most probably been repaired many times. There is thus more chance of the "big un" getting away.

Most of these ponds are down mud tracks a mile or two off the main roads, and when you get to the end of the track you will find three or four ponds of various sizes. They vary from 20 yards square to 100 yards square. They are very dirty, being a dark brown, grey colour, and at the deepest parts they are about eight feet deep.

When you arrive at the pools you are given a bamboo chair, rod rests, landing net, a keep net and sometimes a ticket. For this you pay up to five shillings a day, and you may also buy drinks, meals and fish bait. You are far better off making your own bait, for that which is supplied by the owners of the pond is usually too crumbly and will not stay on the hook. Your next move is to pick the place that you think is going to yield the best fish, sit down and start fishing. In the ponds there are three ways to fish—float fishing spinning and bottom fishing.

To take the first, the way you would float fish would be to take a size 16 hook, a five-pound fishing line, a thin quill float and lead shot. The bait you would use would be anything soft that would stay on the hook. The float would be at five-foot depth with a long, hollow glass rod. For spinning it is best to use a six-foot spinning rod with a fixed spool reel. Silver spinners are the best. You should cast near the edge and reel in slowly. You would soon feel a tug on the rod and then it would be up to you to strike quickly. Bottom fishing is the patient way of doing it, and with it you would use your spinning rod and reel with about four treble hooks on and with a lead weight attached to the end. You would then cast to where you think the fish are going to bite, put on an indicator of some sort, and wait.

The baits used for this type of fishing could be tapioca leaf, tapioca root or tapioca paste, brown oats, bread paste, worms, prawns, grasshoppers and other little bits and pieces of similar nature.

The fish you might catch under these circumstances could be arron, carp (silver, golden or ordinary), grasseter, ling, song, sampan and garvia. These can be categorised as follows: ling and song as the biggest and which grow to be about 36lbs; the grasseter and carp family, which grow to be 32lbs. and 8lbs. respectively; and finally the arron, rockfish, garvia and sampan. The latter are scroungers and will go for any type of bait, which can be maddening when you are going for the big ones.

When these fish bite they give a good fight lasting up to an hour or so. I can remember having an eight-pounder fighting for an hour once. I have also seen fishing rods pulled in and never seen again. This to me is real fishing, and I must say that I have never experienced quite the same sort of thrill while fishing in this country.

Denbury Players gain another success

The Regimental pantomime which was performed last December proved to be a most successful production, well up to the standard of previous years, and from the point of view of length, costuming and scenery, probably the most ambitious show to have been put on at Denbury.

Cinderella was the chosen theme and as is customary, the producer was Mr. Mike Grant who was most ably assisted by Lt Lee Tilson, who also took the part of Baron Hardup. The music of William Gilbert and the words of Ronald Parr were combined to give an unusual and entertaining version of a very old story, without losing the basis of the plot, nor in fact, the familiar characters and atmosphere which are so much part and parcel of pantomime generally.

Three performances were given, the first on Sunday afternoon for the children of the Regiment as well as groups of youngsters from homes in the area. These later went on to the traditional Christmas party with the usual cakes, jellies etc., and the visit from Father Christmas with presents for all. Monday night saw the boys as the audience and they seemed to enjoy it, particularly seeing familiar faces in unfamiliar "get-up." Staff, families and friends of the cast provided the substantial Tuesday night audience, and it was here that the cast really responded, gave their all and produced a first class, talented and thoroughly entertaining performance.

Cinderella herself was played by Janita MacManus who gave a most confident and polished display in the title role. She cut a very pretty picture indeed on the stage, even in the traditional rags and tatters of the maid of all work. Her assistant in the tragic-comedy role of Buttons was Lt Eddie Hampson who confessed afterwards that he had never realised that his vocal talents would be called upon in such a situation before he arrived in the South West. Brenda Jones sang very well as the ever present Dandini whilst Jean Carpenter proved to be a most introspective and moody Prince Charming, exactly capturing the feeling of the part.

Miss Janeta McManus as Cinderella.

(by Lt Tilson)

The scheming Rudolph (Maj 'Dusty' Miller) leers as the idiotic Ugly Sister (Maj John Joyner) splits her stays at a private joke.

Miss Mabel Mabb and her able assistant were played competently by Joan Joyner and Lesley Baker, whilst the former's husband, Major John Joyner, joined Mr. John Brown in the comedy roles of the Ugly Sisters. The slapstick of these two was balanced by the evil idiocy of Major "Dusty" Miller as Rudolph, the villain of the piece, and the crackpot creations of Baron Hardup.

Fairies, attendants, ladies and gentlemen of the court were played by, Doris Crook, Pamela Errat, Linda Woods, Susan Moffat, Susan Doyle, Maureen Bowdidge, Carol Maunder, Ann Edgecumbe, Phillipa McMahon, Jacqueline McMahon, Winifred Rowlands, Paul McMahon, Bernard Hallows, Tom Joynes, Zeigy Hebdon, Steven Sparnon, Roy Gordon, Harry Connal, Arthur Young and Colin Campbell.

Finally a word to praise to the stage staff who also gave many hours of time and much ingenuity in creating the settings for the pantomime. Special mention should be made of Major Woodcock's kitchen range which really looked as though it could do all the things the Baron said it could, and also the costumes which were the creations of Mrs. Joyce McMahon and her several assistants.

And finally, it is with regret that the Drama Club has to say farewell to Major and Mrs. Joyner who will shortly be leaving for different pastures. They gave their whole-hearted supported to everything that was done on the stage at Denbury, and one could always count on them to "deliver the goods" at the right time. We wish them many more happy years on the stage.

REPORT ON THE INHABITANTS OF THE PLANET EARTH AS DELIVERED TO THE GOVERNMENT OF PLANET JUPITER BY RECCE SHIP PB/1234

After making one orbit of the planet and making checks on temperature, atmosphere and solidity of the ground, we landed and discovered that we had put down in what appeared to be a forest. We searched around and saw many strange creatures dressed in what seemed to be the most uncomfortable form of clothing which could be devised. They all held what bore a striking resemblance to ancient firesticks in their hands; these they hurled about in a most weird fashion while a red-faced, red-eyed, rotund person yelled at them and appeared to be getting even redder in both complexion and eye.

No one seemed to notice us, but this is not to be wondered at since they all rushed around, apparently getting nowhere at all; but they looked happy enough in their simple fashion. We moved on to a grassy area and here we found the most remarkable sight to assail our eyes during the whole duration of our expedition. Our attention was drawn to a battle that was raging by the yells and screams of a number of people who were not actually taking part in the affray. The combatants themselves were divided into two groups and each group wore a distinctly coloured shirt, stockings to match and the very briefest of shorts. They too yelled occasionally, and there were also screams of agony as very big men punched very small men—a very unfair combat it seemed to us.

There was a clearly defined area out of which the two armies were not allowed to move, and there was also another man who wore a different coloured shirt again and whose function seemed to be to supply the music, for he was constantly blowing on a pipe. I do not think he was a very popular man, for there were many ugly looks aimed in his direction and there were many foul utterings made under the breath of a number of the gladiators on the battlefield.

Things were quite quiet when suddenly a huge roar made us quake in our boots. A man broke away from a large group of fighters who were hitting at each other in a most heartless fashion. He was carrying what appeared to be a large oval seed, and he was hotly pursued by another man in different colours who flung himself viciously at the seed-carrying man's legs. Although he brought him to the ground with a bone-shattering crunch, he was too late to get the seed, which seemed to be the object of the exercise, for it had already been passed to another fighter, who ran up to a set of posts, planted the seed on the ground, before rushing back to the open arms of his comrades. Then ensued what appeared to be a ritual dance, whilst one of the combatants picked up the seed, stroked it gently and then proceeded to place it with many odd gesticulations on the ground before kicking it high in the direction of the aforementioned posts. There was much laughing and slapping of backs at this point, and the battle was obviously won. But no! this was not so. The battle recommenced and much heaving, punching and biting took place. The observers of this contest, too, were getting violent, and we were forced to leave when one of the group who were watching approached us and, with a nose leer on his face, said: "Dig that crazy mod gear, kid." Such an expression had never occurred in the language lessons we took prior to our coming to earth, so we decided that the best course of action under the circumstances was to leave at once. This we did whilst the fiery battle continued in the arena.

J/Sig. HILD, Iron Troop.

FAREWELLS

This term a few of the more familiar faces around camp are missing as they have passed on to pastures new. Among these is the old weapon training officer, Lt Graham Saunders, who has moved to Catterick on a course prior to his moving on to another course with the Army Air Corps.

The new Adjutant is Capt Tim Cornwell who has taken over this position from Capt Colin Rayner who is moving to the Far East. None will miss Capt Rayner more than the Regimental rugby team who have relied on his very strong running to literally win a match on several occasions.

Although still with us at the time of publication, possibly the most familiar figure of all will shortly be on his way to Catterick. I refer to Maj John Joyner who has, after many years with the Junior Leaders' Regiment, opted to take on fresh responsibilities with another unit. Maj Joyner has left behind an image of a person entirely dedicated to the welfare of boys, and his devotion to the cause of Adventure Training has made this facet of a boy's background at Denbury first class. His knowledge of all the highways and byways of Dartmoor is second to none, and the Ten Tors Expedition routes will remain as an example of his thoroughness and planning ability.

EVEN MORE SUCCESSES FOR REGIMENTAL GYMNASTS

GREAT INDIVIDUAL AND TEAM VICTORIES

Following the success of the club in the Command Championships, further laurels were gained in the Army Finals for 1965 at Aldershot in late November. The Club retained the Junior Army Cup by defeating the Army Apprentice School from Harrogate, in a fairly close contest. The individual junior championship, won last year by J/Sig Norgrove (now L/Cpl), was duly returned to the unit by virtue of the efforts of Junior Corporal Riddell. In the Senior event, with SI Dick Dart as our representative, the club gained further success, returning for the first time with the Senior Trophy.

The second day of the Championships saw the beginning of the Senior competition, and at the end of the morning SI Dart was placed second overall at the completion of the four compulsory routines. In the afternoon a 9.1 score on the parallel bars and an excellent vault put him in the lead which he was never to lose again in the competition. SI Dart's name was added to Southern Trophy alongside more illustrious names of those who have gained international status such as SIs Wooley, Wilson and Pollard. His bag also included plaques for winning individual events such as the parallel bars and the vault. It was an excellent and well deserved win resulting from many hours hard work. We may see SI Dart entering the Army Olympic Championship next year which includes routines on the rings and pommel horse as well as the four standard pieces.

The following day the junior team of J/Cpls Riddell, and Dyer, J/Sig Kendall and J/Sig Cumberpatch retained the team cup and in doing so were not beaten as a team on any one piece of apparatus. Riddell's performance was excellent in all departments not dropping below 9 marks for any routine. This earned him the individual title, with Cumberpatch a good second. A special word of praise is due to Cumberpatch for his improvement; he captured third place in the Command stage and in three weeks brought his marks up remarkably over his team rivals to become runner-up. He is present for next year's competition, along with Dyer and the reserve Honey, a fact which augurs well for the future.

The Junior Trampoline event was won by Junior Para Company, who were also winners at Southern Command by beating our team by .3 marks. In the Final they were winners by a full mark which is a good indication of the progress which they had made. Next year we hope to provide a team to return to the army finals and with the provision of a twist belt from welfare grant they should be equipped to perform somersaults with full twists in swingtime—a feat which sealed the championship for the Junior Paras.

Next term the club will start practising from the word go on all the routines (including those on the pommel horse and rings) in preparation for next year, and they will have chance to use them since much of the presentation and public display material this year will include, and in fact will be mainly based on, voluntary performance. Competition for places in the team will be very keen for there are some very good prospects coming into the club at the present time. However, anyone who is interested in becoming a member should contact the Gym staff who will put them on the right lines. Perhaps next year you may be completing a voluntary groundwork routine like Riddell, such as the one described below, which earned him the very good mark of 9.1 out of a possible 10.

“Front somersault, forward roll, headspring, forward roll to kneeling, side lunge. Leg circles to seat, shoot through. Backward roll to handstand. Running handspring to one leg, cartwheel, handstand with full turn, down to one leg and front panche. Running Arab turn and two back flips.”

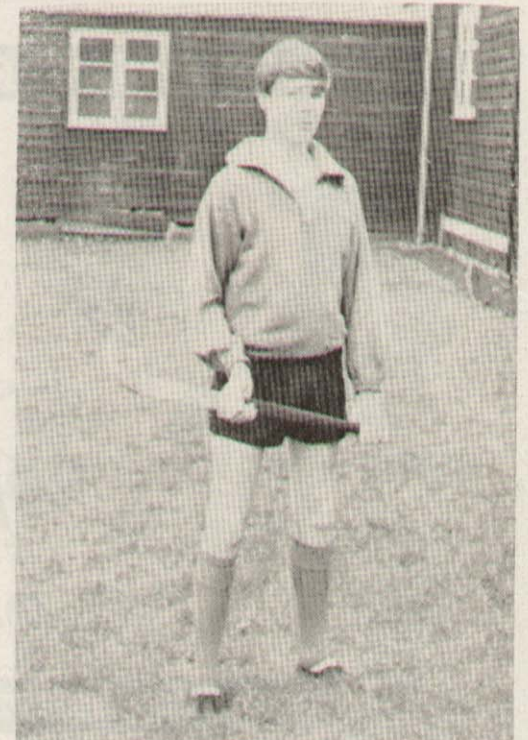

Generally then a pleasing result all round, and due entirely to hard work on the part of boys and staff who gave up much spare time to capture these trophies. It will not stop here and much hard work is ahead to retain the prizes for the standard is creeping up every year.

CCP.

SENIOR EDUCATION OFFICER'S LETTER

I am addressing my letter this time mainly to Junior Leaders and their parents. You are all well aware of the fact that the aim of this Regiment is to produce Warrant Officers and senior NCOs of the future for the Royal Corps of Signals. I am sure that everyone will appreciate that to take an upward step on the promotion ladder a soldier must have the appropriate qualifications in military proficiency, trade and education. Our task in Academic Wing is to enable the Junior Leader to qualify educationally for eventual promotion during Man Service in accordance with the following table:

Junior Leaders' Test	Equivalent Adult Test	Educationally qualified for promotion to:
Junior Test	Army Certificate of Education (Third Class)	Lance Corporal and Corporal
Intermediate Test	ACE II.	Sergeant or Staff Sergeant
Senior Test or 4 specified subjects giving exemption from ACE I.		WOII or WOI

To give an example of how this works out in practice, here is a simple breakdown of the educational qualifications gained by the 89 Junior Leaders who graduated to Man Service in December, 1965:

Passed	Qualified educationally for promotion to:	All
Junior Test	Corporal	68
Intermediate Test	Staff Sergeant
Senior Test or exempt ACE I.	WOI.	21

I must add that, of the 68 who have passed the Intermediate Test, 60 have one, two or three subjects at Senior Level to count towards the four subject passes required for the Army Certificate of Education, First Class.

This is satisfactory, but there is always room for improvement. It must be remembered that, in this Regiment, a Junior Leader spends approximately one-third of his training time on education. He therefore has a great opportunity to not only gain exemption from ACE I, but also to go on to the General Certificate of Education 'O' Level if he has both the ability and the will to succeed.

For our part we, the instructional team, are constantly striving to improve and revise our methods of presentation. In return I ask from Junior Leaders the determination not to waste this educational opportunity. The occasional lad who "coasts" through his lessons instead of driving hard the whole time is fooling only himself. He is delaying his prospects of future promotion and of better pay. He is also letting down the Royal Corps of Signals, who urgently require high quality NCOs and WOs.

I ask the parents to continue to encourage their lads to give of their best. Encourage them to read during their leave periods, to take an intelligent interest in current events, to follow the affairs of the Army in particular and the Services in general.

We want your son to stretch his mind. Tests and examinations are necessary hurdles to be jumped, but education means more than tests and examinations. The army of today and tomorrow needs young leaders who are willing to use their initiative and who are keen to acquire new knowledge and skills.

Captain Tony Watson brings the ball under control in a recent staff hockey match.
